This new electric car family called Sonita is a project 100% "Made in Italy" and it should be ready to start the production of the first model (the Van in the picture) by the middle of 2014.

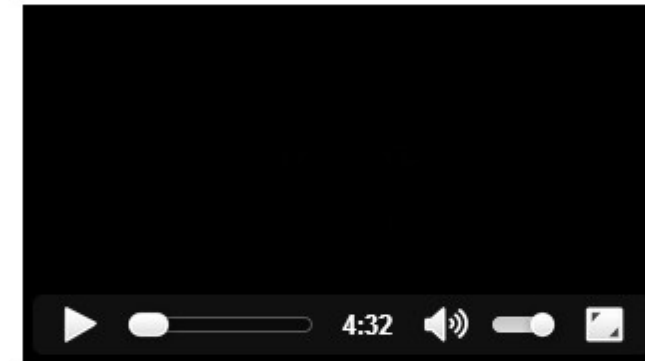

Sonita cars follows the philosophy of the "economic, ecological, electro car" perfect for transporting people, pets and products: a vehicle's family for development and progress respectful of the natural cycles, but also capable of giving employment to terrestrial resources without depleting the planet.

Antonio Bertolotto, created the Sonita project thanks to four related teams with decades of work, thanks to the support of a group of specialized technicians in electrical engineering, a team builder of racing cars, a project manager and designer who has created the best prototypes of luxury cars, sports sedans, trucks and luxury boats and works car manufacturer over the past 40 years.

Sonita is expected to build 9 models and the first to be produced will be the "Van" by the middle of 2014.
